Important Information

- The Association of Residential Letting Agents (ARLA) is a regulatory body for the industry which offers certain safeguards to tenants and customers.
- Agencies will normally make a charge to the tenant once they have found a suitable property. These costs can vary enormously and you are advised to check with the agent when you first make contact and find out what the charge is for. It is illegal for any agency to charge a fee to applicants unless suitable accommodation is found.
- For a more comprehensive list of letting agents you can refer to a directory such as the Yellow Pages or local newspapers, in particular the Thursday night edition of the Daily Echo (tel. +44 (0) 23 8063 4134).
- There are some websites that collate information on available properties from a wide range of different letting agents. Examples of this include www.rightmove.co.uk and www.primelocation.com
