

Career Options with your LLM

Introduction

Every student will have individual reasons for undertaking the LLM qualification. These may include enhancing or broadening career opportunities or adding value and depth to their CV.

This leaflet aims to outline some of the typical job opportunities open to LLM students.

What skills does an LLM develop?

As well as intellectual skills and professional expertise in a specialist area of law (e.g. Maritime, IT Law etc.) the LLM course also enables you to develop a wide range of generic key transferable skills which are useful in whatever career path you choose to pursue. These include legal research and writing, analysis, critical evaluation and logical thinking as well as written and verbal communication.

Your team work and leadership skills will also be enhanced through participation in the LLM Challenge.

What types of careers can LLM graduates consider?

UK Legal Market

As every student has a different background and experience there is no single route to qualifying or working in the UK legal market. You will have to research the routes available and determine which of these is relevant and appropriate for you.

Solicitor:

Many law firms recruit trainee solicitors. This involves completing a Legal Practice Course (LPC) followed by a two year Training Contract. Depending on your previous experience and qualifications, you may have to complete a conversion course known as a Graduate Diploma in Law (GDL) before undertaking the LPC.

For further information see: http://www.prospects.ac.uk/solicitor_training.htm

If you are a qualified lawyer in your home jurisdiction you may satisfy the requirements for the Qualified Lawyers Transfer Scheme (QLTS). Further information is available on the Solicitors Regulation Authority's website: <http://www.sra.org.uk/solicitors/qlts.page>

Occasionally overseas qualified lawyers practice in the UK without requalifying. You should contact the person responsible for the 'experienced hire/lateral recruitment' in the Human Resources department in the firms in which you are interested.

Examples of global firms which have employed LLM students in the past at different levels including trainees include:

- Allen & Overy
- Linklaters
- Norton Rose Fulbright
- Hogan Lovells
- White & Case
- Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer
- Clifford Chance
- Shearman Sterling
- Wolf Theiss
- Gleiss Lutz.

These opportunities are often in their overseas offices.

Quotes from global law firms' websites, regarding LLM recruitment:

"At Allen & Overy we actively seek to recruit students with exceptional academics, a commitment to law, strong communication skills and an international perspective – which is why we welcome applications from LL.M students. Our preference is for LL.M students to join an Allen & Overy office in the jurisdiction where they are qualified or qualifying into." Allen and Overy

"We recognise the diversity of background, education and experience represented by LLM students and so we treat each application on an individual basis. This includes considering where you will be working – although it is usually in your country of qualification." Linklaters

Barrister:

The steps typically taken to become a barrister involve three main stages of training:

1. Academic Stage: an undergraduate degree in law (LLB), or an undergraduate degree in any other subject followed by the Graduate Diploma in Law. If you are an international student and need information on the transferability of your foreign academic qualifications to the UK you should email the Bar Standards Board: contactus@barstandardsboard.org.uk.
2. Vocational Stage: the Bar Professional Training Course (BPTC), which involves one year of full time study or two years' part time study.
3. Pupillage: one year spent as a pupil in barristers' chambers or in another organisation approved by the Bar Standards Board as a Pupillage Training Organisation.

If you are a qualified lawyer regulated in a jurisdiction outside England and Wales and have practised for a minimum of 3 years you may be able to transfer to the Bar in England and Wales.

For further information see the Bar Standards Board website:

Other Opportunities

Depending on the specialist field of law which you have studied in your LLM, you will be able to consider career opportunities relevant to this area of law. Examples include:

- Insurance
- IT
- Finance
- Banking
- Ship financing
- The UN
- The World Health Organisation.

A good example of this is the P&I Clubs who have traditionally targeted Southampton students doing the LLM in Maritime Law. Examples of P&I Clubs include Gard, Steamship, Thomas Miller, Spinnaker and American Steamship. Typical examples of jobs include claims handler and claims executive.

An LLM is also a necessary stepping stone to a PhD. It will enable you to make academic contacts and develop the necessary research and writing skills required to undertake further academic study.
