

Creating Your LinkedIn Profile

Once you've registered with LinkedIn you will need to create your profile. Here's how!

Banner – Including a banner can serve as an extra means of self-promotion.

Pronunciation – If your name is commonly mispronounced, you can add a voice recording of the pronunciation using the LinkedIn mobile app.

Headline – Write a concise headline that is professional but memorable. Think about your current position, what you want to do in the future, and how you are different. If you are looking for work, consider stating this, along with the role you are seeking.

Contact Information – Include contact details so others can contact you.

About – Include a summary that describes your current situation, qualifications, work experiences, and any relevant activities. Focus on accomplishments, why you do what you do, how you can help others, and what you want to do in the future. Aim for at least 40 but no more than 350 words. Be concise and include plenty of keywords. Research what keywords prospects use when searching online for your desired job/service/solution and include these in your summary but do still try to find unique ways to describe yourself. Finish with the action you want others to take.

Featured – You can add multimedia to your profile. For example, you can upload documents or presentations, links to websites, or pin LinkedIn posts or articles that you have written.

Experience – Detail your work experiences and include thorough descriptions. Highlight your accomplishments and the employability skills acquired. If you have lots of work experiences, it is OK to only include the most relevant ones. You can also upload examples of your work or links to webpages.

About

Ellie Atayee-Bennett is an ESRC funded PhD researcher at the University of Southampton in the department of sociology. Her research explores the experiences of Jewish, Christian, and Muslim vegans in Great Britain. In addition to her academic research, Ellie is also an aspiring writer, with a personal website and blog (link in Featured) where she discusses sociology, anthropology, personal development, and wellbeing topics. She is also the founder and sole organiser of the Southampton Vegan Festival, an annual event featuring over 50 exhibitor stalls, talks and activities schedules, and which attracts well over 1,000 visitors each year. Ellie would like to hear about any writing or speaking opportunities related to both her academic and personal interests.

PhD Researcher

University of Southampton
Mar 2020 – Present · 11 mos
Southampton, England, United Kingdom

My PhD in Sociology explores the experiences of Jewish, Christian, and Muslim vegans in the context of late modern Britain. This requires me to have advanced research skills, as well as a deep understanding of ethics and integrity in research. I am also developing my skills in primary data collection and qualitative data analysis, using NVivo primarily. I have an interdisciplinary supervision team, comprising a sociologist, a geographer, and an anthropologist, and am enjoying reading around a wide range of theories and concepts. I also hold a couple of responsibilities, including being the Southampton PhD Representative for the SCDTP and a LinkedIn Learning Champion at the University of Southampton where I am working with both the Doctoral College and t...see more

Founder and Organiser

Southampton Vegan Festival · Self-employed
Jun 2017 – Present · 3 yrs 8 mos
Southampton, England, United Kingdom

In 2017, I founded and organised the Southampton Vegan Festival and have organised it each year since. The event features over 50 exhibitor stalls, including trade stalls, catering stalls and charity stalls, as well as a full schedule of talks and activities. I organise this event alone and have acquired skills in event management, marketing, accounting, people management, social media, and design.

Education – Outline your educational qualifications and write a description for each. Think about modules studied, skills acquired, software programmes learnt, group projects completed, responsibilities undertaken, etc. As with the experience section, you can also upload examples of your work or links to webpages here.

Licences & certifications – Include your other courses and certifications here. Upon completing any LinkedIn Learning courses, you can also select to have them added here.

Volunteering – List any volunteering positions in this section. As with the experience section, write a thorough description and focus on accomplishments and skills acquired.

Skills & endorsements – List at least 8 skills to begin with and try to include both hard skills (e.g. Python) and transferrable skills (e.g. public speaking). Then reorder them so your top 3 are pinned at the top. Ask your contacts to endorse you as this builds credibility and endorse others too. Regularly update this section.

Accomplishments – You can add a range of accomplishments in this section. For example, publications, patents, honours and awards, languages, and projects.

Recommendations – Ask professors, managers, and classmates who you have worked with to write a recommendation for you. This adds credibility to your skills and will add strength to your profile.

Be sure to complete your profile, as members with complete profiles are 40 x more likely to receive opportunities through LinkedIn. In particular, make sure you have a professional photo, as profiles with photos get a lot more views. Also check that your profile is set to public in the settings to improve your visibility. Go to your profile then in the top right, click “Edit public profile & URL”. Next, scroll down and amend the visibility settings so that they match your preferences.

Education
