

Clinical Academic Training Pathway

Studentship opportunities available for nurses, midwives and allied health professionals

Masters Degree Places in Clinical Research

Faculty of Health Sciences, University of Southampton

The Faculty of Health Sciences, University of Southampton is offering 15 fully funded National Institute for Health Research (NIHR) / CNO Studentships*, commencing September 2013, to study on the MRes Clinical Research. Studentships are available for nurses, midwives, physiotherapists, occupational therapists, podiatrists and other Allied Health Professionals.

This is an exciting opportunity for health care professionals interested in career progression with a focus on developing research in clinical practice. The MRes Clinical Research is for graduates wishing to develop expertise in understanding and conducting clinical research in practice. Places are available part-time or full-time and successful applicants will combine a role in clinical practice with study on the MRes Clinical Research; studentships cover salary backfill and course fees.

Applicants will need to possess a 2:1 degree or above, registration with the NMC or HPC and a commitment to developing clinical research in practice and at least one year's post-qualifying experience.

Studentships will be offered on a secondment basis, and applicants must demonstrate support for their application from their clinical manager / employing organisation.
