

Mark Hanson

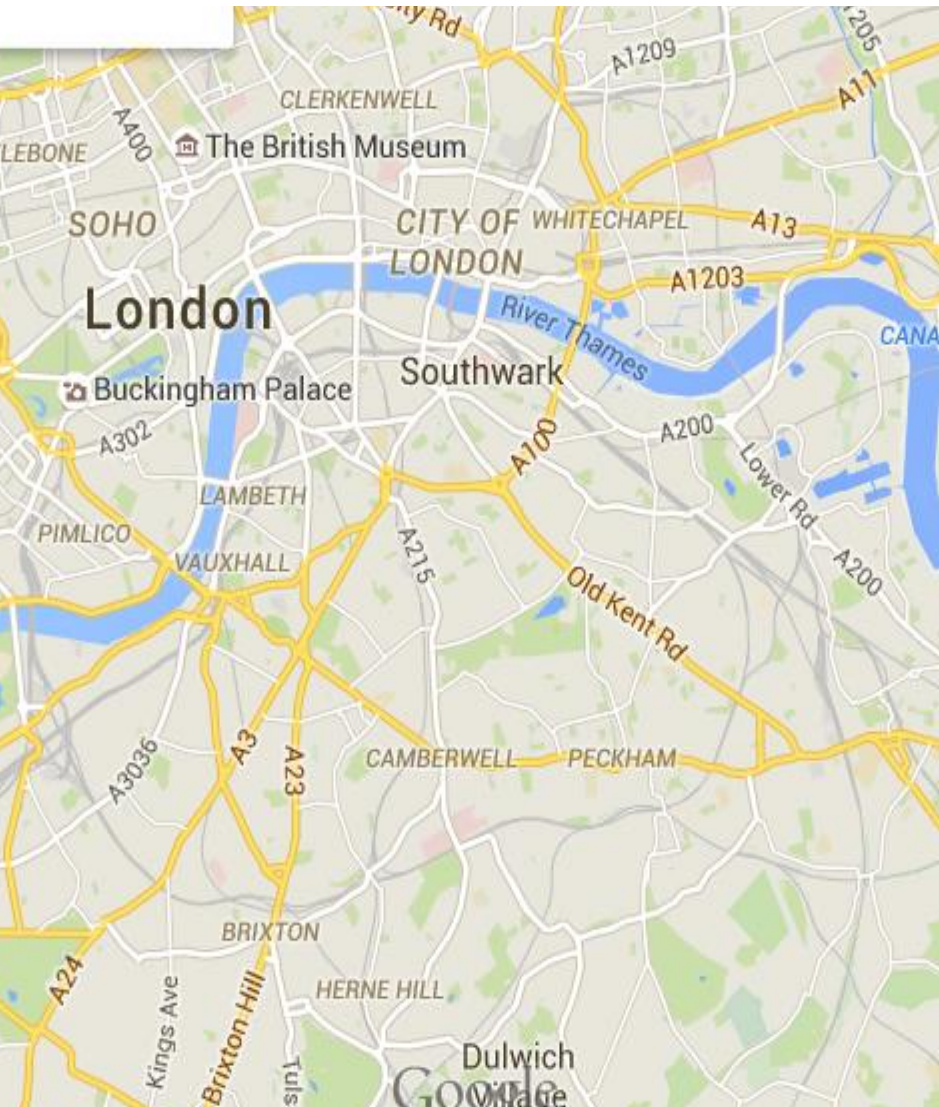

DOHaD

International Society for Developmental Origins of Health and Disease

The Peckham experiment 1926-50

Drs. George Williamson & Innes Pearse

Population of Peckham, London

THE PECKHAM EXPERIMENT: The Pioneer Health Centre

- Health is a process that has to be cultivated if it is to thrive.
- If people are given information about themselves and their families they will attempt to make decisions that are in the best interests of their families.
- People thrive when they are given the freedom to make choices about their activities and will choose those that help in their development.
- When people are given resources in a community to enable them to grow they will be active in their community for the benefit of that community

20 week fetal profile

Life course model of risk

