

University Regulations and the Equality Act

The general academic regulations are not intended to absolve the University from complying with its obligations under the Equality Act (2010), and its duties not to discriminate and to make reasonable adjustments.