Programme Overview

Brief outline of the programme

Southampton Law School has strong research and teaching profiles in commercial and corporate law, maritime law and international and human rights law, and our LLM Law builds on this diversity of strengths. The LLM Master of Laws programme has been designed to allow you to customise your degree to your interests and career plans and mix and match from our wide range of modules.

Studying law at postgraduate level is an extremely valuable currency in the legal job market as it demonstrates commitment and capability. The LLM Law programme will give you practical insights as well as a theoretical knowledge of law, in order to help you progress in your legal career. Upon completion of the LLM Law programme, you will be able to tackle complex legal issues arising from practical scenarios, and to critically evaluate the principles of the areas of law you have chosen to study and their effectiveness. The LLM Master of Laws will also develop your practical transferable skills, including the ability to conduct independent research, to analyse complex texts, construct arguments and communicate these effectively.

Your contact hours will be eight hours per week and will consist of seminars, or lectures and seminars, depending on the module. As a postgraduate, you will be expected to devote many hours to independent study as preparation for those contact hours and in working on your assignments and dissertation.

The LLM Law programme draws on the research strengths of the School's academic staff who are active at the cutting edge of international and national legal reform and development. The expertise of the staff has been recognised as being of international excellence, and in the School of Law we are strongly committed to providing the very best learning experience for all our students in a friendly, stimulating and research-led environment.

Your contact hours will vary depending on your module/option choices. Full information about contact hours is provided in individual module profiles.

Learning and teaching

The LLM Master of Laws programme is taught through a combination of seminars, or lectures and seminars, and through guided independent study in order to develop your skills of analysis of relevant legal materials, the identification of the key legal and policy issues, and the appraisal of solutions available. In the seminars and lectures you will develop clarity and objectivity in the application of legal principles and the critical appraisal of law. These skills will be further developed through the production of written work (assessed and non-assessed), written feedback and later through engagement with a dissertation supervisor during the dissertation module.

Assessment

Formal examinations and assignments will assess your abilities in relation to the learning outcomes of the LLM Law programme. Furthermore, the dissertation will give you the opportunity to bring together all of the skills developed and acquired throughout the programme.

Special Features of the programme

The LLM Master of Laws programme benefits from the many activities of several research centres within Southampton Law School. You will be able to attend the Wednesday Practitioner Seminar programme organised by the Institute of Maritime Law in which eminent speakers from the shipping and maritime industry come and deliver lectures and seminars on a wide range of commercial law topics. You will also be welcome to attend talks and guest lectures organised by the Centre for Law, Policy and Society, the Centre for Private and Commercial Law, Stefan Cross Centre for Equality Women and the Law, Health Ethics and Law (HEAL) and the iLaws Centre on IT law, all of which regularly invite academics and legal practitioners to reflect on current legal issues. This provides an exceptional opportunity for you to speak to, learn from and network with practitioners in the field.

The postgraduate cohort of Southampton Law School has always been very international, with students studying with us from many corners of the world. We take account of the fact that many of our LLM students do not come from a common law legal system and other students have a lot of relevant industry or legal practice experience but do not have a law degree. Therefore, we allocate the first week in each new academic year to run an Intensive Legal Skills Programme called Introduction to Legal Skills that introduces you to the common law system, the interactions of statute and judge-made law as well as the impact of international conventions and model laws on national law. During this week, you will also be introduced to the law library and the many legal databases and other resources we hold. The programme will provide you with the foundations for taking the specialised modules.

You will be warmly invited to the Law Careers Fair to which employers from a wide range of sectors together with Law firms are invited. For further information as well as details on where to look for vacancies and opportunities you should visit the Career Destinations website

Southampton Law School also organises an annual debating competition, the LLM Challenge, where eight teams of postgraduates compete against each other on a diverse range of current legal topics. This competition is popular and each year we award a prize and certificates for the best team.

Please note: As a research-led University, we undertake a continuous review of our programmes to ensure quality enhancement and to manage our resources. As a result, this programme may be revised during a student's period of registration; however, any revision will be balanced against the requirement that the student should receive the educational service expected. Please read our Disclaimer to see why, when and how changes may be made to a student's programme.

Programmes and major changes to programmes are approved through the University's programme validation process which is described in the University's Quality handbook.

Educational Aims of the Programme

The aims of the programme are to: The LLM Master of Laws programme aims to develop your legal skills within a structure that will allow you to shape your degree towards those areas in which your interests match our expertise.

The aims of the programme are to:

- give you a thorough and systematic knowledge and understanding of the main principles of law in each of the modules and an overview of the social, political economic policies and values that underpin them;
- give you an understanding of the processes by which law is produced and to evaluate those processes;
- give you an understanding of how national, regional and international laws interact;
- provide you with experience in dealing with legal principles deriving from a variety of legal instruments, including international conventions, statutes, case law, standard form contracts and soft law;
- enable you to develop skills of legal analysis and problem solving, both systematically and at an advanced level;
- give you a (consolidated) understanding of the workings of the common law system;
- enable you to understand the legal and policy questions at the forefront of the academic discipline and to display a critical awareness of the present legal framework.

Programme Learning Outcomes

Having successfully completed this programme you will be able to demonstrate knowledge and understanding of:

Knowledge and Understanding

On successful completion of this programme you will have knowledge and understanding of:

- A1. the national, regional or international legal framework governing a relevant area of private or public law;
- A2. a range of legal principles and processes drawn from private or public law;
- A3. the policies or values underlying these principles or processes;
- A4. the legal research methods, such as case analysis, statutory review, and consideration of international materials;
- A5. a specific legal area of private or public law.

Teaching and Learning Methods

The knowledge and understanding is acquired through the seminars and lectures and the independent study in preparation for seminars (A1-4). Understanding and knowledge of a specific area of private or public law is acquired through the research required for the Dissertation (A5).

Assessment Method

Knowledge and understanding is assessed through a combination of:

- The written examinations and course work in the case of the taught modules which will assess A1-4;
- The Dissertation concentrates on assessing A5 but will also reflect elements of A1-4.

Subject Specific Intellectual and Research Skills

On successful completion of this programme you will be able to:

- B1. source, interpret and analyse relevant legal materials, including, where appropriate, international conventions, statutes, case law, soft law or standard form contracts;
- B2. identify, evaluate and apply key legal principles in solving complex practical problems;
- B3. identify and critically evaluate key legal and policy issues in their social, political or economic contexts;
- B4. communicate legal arguments clearly, accurately and objectively;
- B5. produce an extensive written discussion that coherently communicates an argument on a specific subject-matter of private or public law.

Teaching and Learning Methods

Lectures, seminars and guided independent study will develop your skills of analysis of relevant legal materials, the identification of the key legal and legal and policy issues and the appraisal of solutions available (B1,B2,B3). In the seminars you will also initially develop the skill of communicating legal arguments with clarity and objectivity (B4). These skills will be further developed through your production of written work (assessed and non-assessed), written feedback and later through collaboration with your dissertation supervisor (B1-B4).

Assessment Methods

Formal examinations and assignments will assess your abilities in relation to B1-B4, with varying emphasis on the practical application of the law (B2) or critical evaluation of legal and policy issues (B3). The Dissertation particularly assesses B5 but will also reflect skills in B1-B4.

Transferable and Generic Skills

On successful completion of this programme you will be able to:

- C1. undertake independent research and access primary and secondary sources effectively;
- C2. analyse complex written texts and evaluate different types of arguments;
- C3. construct arguments and solve problems based on premises drawn from various sources;
- C4. communicate arguments in writing and reference sources appropriately

Teaching and Learning Methods

The main teaching and learning methods towards these learning outcomes will be the preparatory research for seminars and the independent, supervised research during dissertations and assignments C1-C4. Seminar group work will assist in developing your ability to discuss and present the issues under study.

Assessment Methods

All of the above skills are all assessed through the summative assessments, whether in the form of examinations, course work or the final dissertation. The dissertation in particular showcases your ability to undertake independent supervised research, analyse complex texts, construct arguments and communicate these effectively.

Programme Structure

Information about pre and co-requisites is included in individual module profiles.

Where optional modules have been specified, the following is an indicative list of available optional modules, which are subject to change each academic year. Please note in some instances modules have limited spaces available.

Part I

The LLM Master of Laws experience offers a bespoke programme where you can choose your options once you arrive and tailor your studies to your own interests and career development. Hence the programme allows you to make an unrestricted choice across the full range of modules offered (subject to one module (i.e. LAWS6146 Advanced Arbitration Law) that have pre-requisite of LAWS6145 Principles of Commercial Arbitration.
